KC Woodturner Anthony Harris used the McNaughton Coring System to make nested bowls on the wood lathe

Anthony has been a KC Woodturners club member since the club's beginning in 1994. He has used the McNaughton wood coring system for a long time and is very proficient with it. There are several different varieties of wood coring tools and the McNaughton is just one of them. Other coring systems are the One-Way and Woodcut.

AAW 36th Annual International Woodturning Symposium

Chattanooga, Tennessee
June 23 - 26, 2022

Efi Kamara, Rick Bywater, and Jim Lambie were the KCWT representatives at the Annual AAW International Symposium. The reason Efi and I went to Chattanooga is because we were recruited as videographers. What that means is we were worker dudes. What that entails is starting at 8 AM on Thursday and finishing setting up, after lunch attending a two hour training session followed by practicing using the boom camera. Because one person did not show up we were asked to carry a heavier load. Efi did 8 demo's and I did 7 demo's. The AAW scaled back and did not have a demo assistants, so we were call upon to fill that roll as well. My Thursday night, all day Saturday and all day Sunday were spent shooting video. Saturday night at the banquet I wish I had two ibuprofen because standing all day using the boom camera , my lower back was feeling it.

I didn't buy any tools and took very few pictures. We got back at midnight on Sunday following a 10 1/2 hour drive. As you know the AAW is a volunteer organization and if it wasn't for the volunteers and everyone involved, well.....

Thank you Jim Lambie for the photos

The idea of Bridging the Gap challenged me to look at my work and see how it has evolved over time. Each piece is an iterative change and step forward into new ideas about process and shape. This piece represents that growth in my work. It's a simple, but intentional, vessel with a carefully considered form and subtle details. In the broader context of my work, it represents the shift in my design aesthetic from simple utilitarian bowls to more refined vessels with appealing forms.
